

Woods, 619 11th St., Aurora, Nebr. Says Mrs. Woods: "I was in a critical condition. My feet and ankles were so swollen with dropsy, I could not wear my shoes. Fourteen weeks prior to taking Doan's Kidney Pills, I was confined to bed practically helpless. They made me feel like a new woman and soon I was oing my work the same as ever." When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name-DOAN'S." 50c a box at all stores. Foster-Milburn Co.,

NOT EVEN ON HIMSELF.

Buffalo, N. Y.

First Hobo-There's one thing to my credit. Second Hobo-What's that? First Hobo-Nobody can say that I ever threw cold water on anything.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cutlcura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18 K, Boston.

Musician Wanted.

In a parish in Wales where very littie English was spoken a general meeting was held to consider the desirability of putting a chandeller into the schoolroom. Every one seemed in favor of the idea. "Do you think we ought to have one,

Mr. Davis?" said the schoolmaster to a venerable parishoner.

"I agree to it," was the reply; "but there is one thing I wish to know. If we have a-a-

"Chandeller," said the schoolmaster, helping him out.

"If we have a chandelier," the old man continued, "who is going to play

Toasting the Teachers. There was a meeting of the new teachers and the old. It was a sort of love feast, reception or whatever you call it. Anyhow, all the teachers got together and pretended they didn't have a care in the world. After the eats were et the symposiarch proposed

"Long Live Our Teachers!" It was drank enthusiastically. One of the new teachers was called on to respond. He modestly accepted. His answer was: "What on?"

A Change of Opinion. "Talk is cheap," chuckled the politician with the telephone frank in his

After talking $20 worth, he pulled out his frank and found it had expired. "By heck!" he muttered ruefully, "that guy was right when he said that 'Silence is golden.' "-Judge.

A Bad Sign.

She—If I were you, dear, I would not send for that plumber again who came today. He's too inexperienced. He-Didn't he do the work right? She-Yes, he did the work all right, but he brought all the tools he needed

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it Bears the Bears the Signature of Last Hillichirs
In Use For Over 30 Years,
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

He that is taught to live upon little owes more to his father's wisdom than he that has a great deal left him does to his father's care.-Penn.

CHRISTMAS POST CARDS FREE Ecstamp for five samples of my very choiced. Embossed Christmas and New Year ands: beautifut colors and develoes designast Card Club, 721 Jackson St., Topeka, Kansas

It sometimes happens that a man who never even saw an airship flies just as high ead falls just as hard.

We alway respect the opinions of a man who keeps them to himself.

The BRONZE BELL BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE AUTHOR OF "THE BRASS BOWL" ETC. ILLUSTRATIONS BY DAY WALTENS COPYRIGHT BY LOUNS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Pavid Amber, starting for a duck-shooting visit with his friend, Quain, comes upon a young lady equestrian who has been dismounted by her horse recoming frightened at the sudden appearance in the road of a burly Hindu. He dectares he is Behari Lai Chatteril. "The appointed mouthplees of the Bell," addresses Amber as a man of high rank and pressing, a mysterious little bronze box. "The Token," into his hand, disappears in the wood. The girl calls Amber by name. He in turn addresses her as Miss Sophie Farrell, daughter of Col. Farrell of the British diplomatic service in India and visiting the Quains. Several nights later the Quain home is burgiarized and the bronze box stolen. Amber and Quain go hunting on an island and become lost and Amber is left marooned. He wanders about, finally reaches a cabin and recognizes as its occupant an old friend named Rutton, whom he last met in England, and who appears to be in hiding. When Miss Farrell is mentioned Rutton is strangely agitated. Chatteril appears and summons Rutton to a meeting of a mysterious body. Rutton seizes a revolver and dashes after Chatteril. He returns wildly excited, says he has killed the Hindu, takes poison, and when dying asks Anaber to go to India on a mysterious errand. Amber decides to leave at once for India. On the way he sends a letter to Mr. Labertouche, a scientific friend in Calcutta, by a quicker route. Upon arriving he finds a note awaiting him. It directs Amber to meet his friend at a certain place. The latter tells him he knows his mission is to get Miss Farrell out of the country. Amber attempts to dispose of the Token to a money-lender, is mistaken for Rutton and barely escapes being mobbed. A message from Labertouche causes him to start for Darjeeling, and on the way he meets Miss Farrell.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Photograph.

That same night Amber dined at the Residency, on the invitation of Raikes, the local representative of government, seconded by the insistence of Colonel Farrell. It developed that Sophia's telegram had somehow been lost in transit, and Farrell's surprise and pleasure at sight of her were tempered only by his keen appreciation of Amber's adventitious services, slight though they had been. He was urged to stay the evening out, before proceeding to his designated quarters, and the reluctance with which he acceded to this arrangement which worker so happily with his desires. may be imagined.

Ease of anxiety was more than food and drink to Amber; his feeling of relief, to have convoyed Sophia to the company and protection of Anglo-Saxons like himself, was intense. Yet be swallowed his preliminary brandyneg in a distinctly uncomfortable frame of mind, strangely troubled by the reflection that round that lone white table was gathered together the known white population of the state; a census of which accounted for just Amber was relieved when at length the cloth was deftly whisked away and cigars cigarettes, liquors, whisky and soda were served.

Amber took unto himself a cigar and utilized an observation of the Political's as a lever to swing the conversation to a plane more likely to about the exactions of his position as | the run of his kind." particularly instanced by the necessity of his attending tedious and tiresome native ceremonies in connection that babu. with the tamasha.

"What's, precisely, the nature of this tamasha, Colonel Farrell?" "Why, my dear young man, I thought you knew. Isn't it what you came to see?" "No," Amber admitted cautiously; "I merely heard a rumor that there was something uncommon afoot. Is it really anything worth while?"

"Rather," Raikes interjected drily, "the present ruler's abdicating in favor of his son, a child of twelve. That puts the business in a class by itself."

"But why should a prince hand over the reins of government to a child of twelve? There must be some reason for it. Isn't it known?" asked Amber.

"Who can fathom a Hindu's mind?" grunted Farrell. "I daresay there's some scandalous native intrigue at the bottom of it. Eh, Raikes?"

The Resident shook his head. 'Don't come to this shop for information about what goes on in Khandawar. I doubt if there's another Resident in India who knows as little of the underhand devilment in his state as I do. His majesty the Rana loves me as a cheetah loves his trainer. He's an intractable rascal."

"There have been a number of deaths from cholera in the Palace lately, the grand vizier's amongst them "White arsenic cholera?"

"That, and the hemp poison kind." "Refractory vizier?" questioned Farrell. "The kind that wants to retrench and institute reforms-railways and metalled roads and so forth?"

"No; he was quite suited to his master. But the bazar says Naraini took a dislike to him for one reason or another."

"Naraini?" queried Amber.

"The genius of the place." Raikes modded toward the Raj Mahal, shining sick, exiled woman trying to drag a like a pearl through the darkness on song of Home from the broken heart the hillside over against the Residency, "She's Salig's head queen. At lishwoman's India: it's our life, ever country." He laughed uncertainly, east that's about as near to her to strive and struggle and contrive to status as one can get. She's not actu- piece together out of makeshift odds ally his queen, but some sort of a and ends the atmosphere of Home! peritage from the Rutton dynasty-I ardly know what or why. Salig never | She rose with a quick shrug of im-married her, but she lives in the Palace, and for several years-ever since she first began to be talked aboutshe's ruled from behind the screen with a high hand and an outstretched arm. So the bazar says."

They arose and left the table to the servants, the Resident with Amber following Parrell and young Clark-

"Old women we are, forever talking scandal," sald Raikes, with a chuckle. served abstrusely. 'Oh, well! it's shop with us, you know."

"Of course. . . . Then I understand that the tamasha is the reason for the encampment beyond the walls?"

"Yes; they've been coming in for a week. By tomorrow night, I daresay, there in the shadows? every rajah, prince, thakur, baron fief, and lord in Rajputna, each with his 'tail,' horse and foot, will be camped down before the walls of Kuttarpur. You've chosen an interesting time for your visit. It'll be a sight worth seeing, when they begin to make a show. My troubles begin with a state banquet tomorrow that I'd to India—to Kuttarpur, Mr. Amber?" give much to miss; however, I'll have Farrell for company."

"I'm glad to be here," said Amber thoughtfully. Could it be possible that the proposed abdication of Salig Singh in favor of his son were merely a cloak to a conspiracy to restore to power the house of Rutton? Or had the tamasha been arranged in order to gather together all the rulers in Rajputana without exciting suspicion, that they might agree upon a concert ed plan of mutiny against the Sirkar? The state affair of surpassing importance had been arranged for the last day of grace allotted the Prince of the house of Rutton. What had it to do with the Gateway of Swords, the Voice, the Mind, the Eye, the Body, the Bell?

"By the way, Mr. Raikes," said the Virginian suddenly, "what do they call the gate by which we entered the city -the southern gate?"

"The Gateway of Swords, I believe." Farrell, on the point of entering the house, overheard and turned. "Is that so? Why, I thought that gateway was in Kathiapur."

"I've heard of a Gateway of Swords in Kathiapur," Raikes admitted. 'Never been there, myself." "Kathlanur?"

"A dead city, Mr. Amber, not far away-originally the capital of Khandawar. It's over there in the hills to the north somewhere. Old Rao Rutton, founder of the old dynasty, got tired of the place and caused it to be depopulated, building Kuttarpur in its the meal was over, and Miss Farrell stead—I believe, to commemorate having withdrawn in conformance with some victory or other. That sort of bing used to be quite the fashion india, before we came." Raikes fell back, giving Amber precedence as they entered the Residency. "By the way, remind me, if you think of it, Colonel Farrell to get after the telegraph clerk tomorrow. There's a new man in charge-a Bengali babu-and inform him. Farrell had grumbled I presume he's about as worthless as

Amber made a careful note of this information; he was curious about

In the drawing room Raikes and Farrell impressed Clarkson for threehanded bridge. Sophia did not care to play and Amber was ignorant of the game-a defect in his social education which he found no cause to re gret, since it left him in undisputed attendance upon the girl.

She had seated herself at a warped and discouraged plane, for which Raikes had already apologized; it was, he said, a legacy from a former Resident. For years its yellow keys had not known a woman's touch such as that to which they now responded with thin, cracked voices; the girl's fine, slender fingers wrung from them a plaintive, pathetic parody of melody. Amber stood over her with his arms folded on the top of the instrument. comfortably unconscious that his pose was copied from any number of sentimental photogravures and "art photographs." His temper was sentimental enough, for that matter, the woman was very sweet and beautiful in his eyes as she sat with her white, round | arms flashing over the keyboard, her head bowed and her face a little averted, the long lashes low upon her cheeks and tremulous with a fathomless emotion. It was his thought that his time was momentarily becoming shorter, and that just now, more than ever, she was very distant from his arms, something inaccessible, too rare and delicate and fine for the rude possession of him who sighed for his own unworthiness.

Abruptly she brought both hands down upon the keys, educing a jangled, startled crash from the tortured wires, and swinging round, glanced up at Amber with quaint mirth trembling behind the veil of moisture in her misty eyes. "India!" she cried, with a broken laugh: "India epitomized: a homeof a crippled plano! That is an Eng-. It's sufficenting in here. Come."

patience, and led the way back to the !

Pensive, the girl trained her long skirts heedlessly over the dewdrenched grasses, Amber at her side, himself speechless with an intangible, incluctable, unreasoning sense of ex shaft of light streamed out like vaporpectancy. Never, he told himself, had | ized gold. a lover's hour been more auspiciously timed or staged; and this was his hour, altogether his! . . . If only he might find the words of wooing to which his lips were strange! He dared not delay; tomorrow it might be too late; in the womb of the morrow a world of chances stirred-contingencies that might in a breath set them a world apart. They found seats in the shadow of pepul.

"Are you in the habit of indulging in protracted silences?" she rallied him gently. "Between friends of old standing they're permissible, I believe,

"A day's journey by tonga matures acquaintanceship wonderfully," he ob-

"Indeed?" She laughed.

"At least, I hope so." He felt that he must be making progress; thus far he had been no less inane than any average lover of the stage or fiction. And he wondered: was she laughing at him, softly,

"You see," she said, amused at his relapse into reverie, "you're incurable and ungrateful. I'm trying my best to be attractive and interesting, and you won't pay me any attention whatever. There must be something on your mind. Is it this mysterious errand that brings you so unexpectedly

'Yes," he answered truthfully. "And you won't tell me?" "I think I must," he said, bending forward.

There sounded a stealthy rustling in the shrubbery. The girl drew away With a bound, a man in native dress before them, panting.

perfectly candid in his assertion that he had no suspicion of what the packet might contain, and a moment of Residency, from which a broad later they stood beneath the window Amber held the packet to the light;

it was oblong, thin, stiff, covered with common paper, guiltless of superscription, and sealed with mucilage. He tore the covering, withdrew the enclosure, and heard the girl gasp with surprise. For himself, he was transfixed with consternation. His look wavered in dismay between the girl and the photograph in his hand—her photograph, which had been stolen from him aboard the Poonah.

She extended her hand imperiously. "Give that to me, please, Mr. Amber," she insisted. He surrendered it without a word. "Mr. Amber!" she eried in a voice that guivered with wonder and resentment.

He faced her with a hang-dog air, feeling that now indeed had his case been made hopeless by this contretemps. "Confound Labertouche!" he cried in his ungrateful heart. "Confound his medding mystery-mongering and hokus-pokus!"

"Well?" inquired the girl sharply. "Yes, Miss Farrell." He could invent nothing else to say. "You-you are going to explain, I presume.

He shook his head in despair. "What!"

"I've no explanation whatever to make—that'd be adequate, I mean." He saw that she was shaken by impatience. "I think," said she evenly-I think you will find it best to let me judge of that. This is my photograph. How do you come to have it? What right have you to it?"

"I . . . ah . . ." He stam-mered and paused, acutely conscious and rose with a startled exclamation. of the voices of the Englishmen, Farrell, Raikes, and young Clarkson, sped from the shadows and paused drifting out through the open window of the drawing room. "If you'll be Amber jumped up, overturning his kind enough to return to our chairs," chair, and instinctively feeling for the 'he said, "I'll try to make a satisfac

A dear friend of mine owned the photograph. He gave it to me at my request. I came to India, and on the steamer lost it; in spite of my offer of a reward, I was obliged to leave the boat without it, when we got to Calcutta. My friend here knew how highly I valued it-" "Why?" "Because I'd told him."

"I don't mean that. Why do you value it so highly?" "Because of its original." He took heart of despair and plunged boldly. She looked him over calmiy. "Do you mean me to understand that you told this friend you had followed me to India because you were in love with me?"

"Precisely. . . Thank you."
She laughed a little, mockingly. 'Are you, Mr. Amber?" "In love with you? . . . Yes."

"And how soon will you be free to tell me the whole truth?" "Only after . . . we're married." She laughed adorably. "Mr. Amber," she protested, "you are danger-ous—you are delightful! Do you really believe I shall ever marry you?" "I hope so. I came to India to ask you—to use every means in my power love you." "And . . . and when is this to happen, please-in the name of im-"As soon as I can persuade you-tonight, if you will." "Oh!" He was obilged to laugh with her at the absurdity of the suggestion.

"Or to morrow morning, at the very latest," he amended seriously. don't think we dare wait longer.' "Why is that?"

"Delays are perilous. There might be another chap."

"How can you be sure there is'nt already?"

He fell sober enough at this. "But there isn't, is there, really?" She delayed her reply provokingly. At length, "I don't see why I should say," she observed, " but I don't mind telling you-no. there isn't-yet." And as she spoke, Farrell called "Sophia?" from the window of the drawing room She stood up, answering clearly with the assurance that she was coming.

ward the house. Amber followed, deeply anxious. T've not offended you?"

and began deliberately to move to-

"No," she told him gravely, "but you have both puzzled and mystified me. I shall have to sleep on this before I can make up my mind whether or not to be offended."

. . will you marry me?" "And . "Oh, dear! How do I know?" she laughed.

"You won't give me a hint as to the complexion of my chances?" She paused, turning. "The chances,

Mr. Amber," she said without affectation or coquetry, "are all in your favor . . . if you can prove your case. I do like you very much, and you have been successful in rousing my interest in you to an astonishing degree. . . . But I shall have to think it over; you must allow me at least 12 hours' grace." "You'll let me know tomorrow morn-

"Yes."

"Early?" "You've already been bidden to breakfast by Mr. Raikes.' "Meanwhile, may I have my photograph? "Mine, if you please! . . think not; if my decision is favorable, you shall have it back-after break-

"Thank you," he said meekly. And as they were entering the Residency he hung back. "I'm going now," he said; "it's good night. Will you remember you've not refused me the privilege of hoping?" "I've told you I like you, Mr. Am-Impulsively she extended her hand. "Good night."

He bowed and put his lips to it; and she did not resist.

(TO BE CONTINUED.) Sure, He Did the Right Thing!

"I hope it will be a long time before have such another test applied to my honesty," a down-town merchant remarked as he returned from walting on a customer, relates the St. Paul Dispatch. "What was the trouble?" asked his partner. "These near-wool suits. An old fellow came in just now and asked me the price me?" she began to cross-examine him. of one. 'Seven dollars,' I told him. 'Speak louder!' he said, holding his hand behind his ear. So I yelled, Seven dollars! 'Eleven dollars! Too much! I'll give you nine!' he replied." His partner looked at the speaker in alarm. 'Y'ou-er-of course, did the right thing?" "I guess Rutton would permit. "Because it's you can depend on me to do the right thing," was the haughty retort. Then he paused. "You'd better get some dollar bills when you go to the bank," he remarked. "I just gave an old fellow our last one for change."

> Army and Navy Inventors. There are numerous examples of officers of the army and navy inventing machinery and devices which are used by the service without any compensation from the government. Generally speaking, they are guided by the code of honor that as they were educated at the expense of the government and enlisted in its service it has the right to the use of their inventions without payment of royalty or other money. There have been many who have not considered themselves so bound, and have claimed compensation for use of their inventions.-The Bookman.

Another Phase of the Problem. "Doubtless the servant girl problem

'Upon my word-! I haven't the least of the story, lacking details, for the is very annoying to you." "Very," responded the housewife. "I have a really desperate time getting "For the present? You mean you'll maids my clothes won't fit."

For Court Ladies Only.

One of the most exclusive clubs in London is the Queen Alexandra, which "Well," drawled the actor, "$2,500 a cylinders being so connected with of entertainment is almost always

"Sometime, yes. But now, I may THERE WITH A REPUTATIO

Doubtful and Humillated Hubby Now Probably Believes Wife Can Keep a Secret.

"The late William Rotch Wister, the father of American cricket, might also be said to have been a godfather of the feminist movement," said a woman writer at the Acorn club in Philadelphia. "Mr. Wister," she continued, "abominated that type of husband who treats his wife like a child, refusing to take her into his confidence. I once heard Mr. Wister tell a story about a Germantown man of that sort. "The man came back from a bustness meeting wherein the future welfare of himself and his family was vitally involved, but he declined to tell his wife what had been the meeting's outcome. "'Oh, no,' he sneered, 'I can't tell you anything. You'd repeat it if I did. You, being a woman, are constitutionally unable to keep a secret.'

"But the wife, with a quiet smile, retorted: 'George, did I ever tell the secret of how you were led astray that summer the church conference met in Chicago and got arrested in a to make you marry me. You see, I saloon for biting off the bartender's ear?""

Synonyms.

The French Canadian always has trouble with the aspirate "th." At a debating club in the Province of Quebec members were required to draw a slip from a hat and debate upon the subject they received. A young countryman arose. "I have drew the word 'bat.' I must told you dere is two, tree different kind of bat. Dere is de bat wot you play de baseball wit, de bat wot fly in de air at night and also de bat where you take de swim."-Success Magazine.

The Facetlous Farmer. "I am an actor out of work. Can you give me employment on your farm?

"I can. But a day on a farm is no 20-minute sketch." "I understand that." "All right. Yonder is your room. When you hear a horn toot about 4 a. m. that's your cue." Small Circulation.

Shopman-Here is a very nice thing n revolving bookcases, madam. Mrs. Newrich-Oh, are those revolving bookcases? I thought they called them circulating libraries.-Christian Register.

Thousands of country people know the value of Hamlins Wizard Oil, the best family medicine in case of accident or sudden illness. For the safety of your

A Cross-Reference. Mistress-Have you a reference? Bridget-Folne; Of held the poker over her till I got it.-Harper's Bazar.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invig-orate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugarcoated tiny granules. He that doth a base thing in zeal for his friends burns the golden thread that ties their hearts together - my Taylor.

Chest Pains and Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent remedy for chest and throat affections. It quickly relieves congestion and inflammation. A few drops in water used as a gargle is antiseptic and healing.

Here's Proof

"I have used Sloan's Linkeaut for years and can testify to its wonderful efficiency. I have used it for sore throat, croup, lame back and rheumatism and in every case it gave instant relief." REBECCA JANE ISAACS, Lucy, Kentucky.

SLOAN'S is excellent for sprains and bruises. It stops the pain at once and reduces swelling very quickly.

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible - they not only give relief - they perma nently cure Con them for

Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE Genuine must bear Signature

Year, but It Wouldn't Keep New Yorker in Alimony.

Occasionally he takes a fiver over to that it was tied up in bonds or some the big rity, being fond of the places thing and that he only got the interest where the electric lights are not on the money. doused at 11 p. m. He was confiding Philadelphian Might Do on $2,500 a rich uncle had recently died and left him quite a considerable legacy. He was quite jubilant over his good fortune, but at the same time he explain-He was a visitor from Philadelphia, ed that he couldn't touch the principal,

"Do you think," he said, "that a felwhat is your income?" was about $2,500 a year. to a group of chance acquaintances low on an independent income could "Well," drawled the actor, "$2,500 a cylinders being so connected with of enter over a Broadway bar the fact that a live comfortably in New York and year might be a whole lot of money each other that when a submarine possible.

"That would depend upon the you in alimony!"-New York Times.

"Naraini?" Queried Amber.

overheard."

The girl doubted, was strongly in clined to refuse him; then, perhaps moved to compassion by his abject at titude, she relented and agreed, "Very well," she said, and retaining the picture moved swiftly before him into the shadowed garden. He lagged after her, inventing a hundred impracticable yarns. She found her chair and sat down with a manner of hauteur moderated by expectancy. He took

'Who sent you this photograph of

"I'm sorry I can't tell you just now."

it occurred to him to tell the truth-as much of it, at least, as his word to mine. My friend knew I had lost

"How could it have been yours? It was taken in London a year ago. I sent copies only to personal friends who, I know, would not give them away." She thought it over and added:

"The Quains had no copy; it's quite impossible that one should have got to

"None the less," he maintained

"I can hardly be expected to be-

"You persist in saying that you got

"How?" she propounded trium-

"I can't tell you, except vaguely. If ou'll be content with the substance

"After you left the Quains."

tell me the whole truth-?"

stubbornly, "it's mine, and I got it in Why did he send it?"

. . ." In his desperation his place beside her.

"A friend."

it."

America."

America.'

lieve that."

"I'm sorry."

it in America?"

"I must."

"When?"

phantly.

present-

"His name?"

"Oh! . . .

pistol that was with his traveling | tory explanation. I'd rather not be things, upstairs in the Residency.

The native, reassured him with a swift, obsequious gesture. "Pardon, sahib, and yours, sahiba, if I have alarmed you, but I am come on an errand of haste, seeking him who is

"I am he. What do you want with

"It is only this, that I have been

The man fumbled hurriedly in the folds of his surtout, darting quick glances of apprehension round the garden. Amber looked him over as closely as he could in the dim light, but found bim wholly a stranger-merely a low-caste Hindu, counterpart of a million others to be encountered daily in the highways and bazars of India. The Virginian's rising hope that he might prove to be Labertouche failed for want of encouragement;

the intruder was of a stature the Englishman could by no means have

"From whom come you?" he de

"Nay, a name that is unspoken harms none, sahib." The native produced a small, thin, flat package and thrust it into Amber's hands. "With permission, I go, sahib; it were un-

"None, sahib." The man salaamed and strode away, seeming to melt

For a minute Amber remained

"I think you are a very interesting

. I begin to think person, Mr. Amber," she said, resum-

"Well! . . I begin to think this a most uncommonly interesting turning the package over and over.

"Why not bring it to the light, and astare. The girl's voice alone roused manded in the vernacular.

"There is no answer?"

soundlessly into the foliage.

otion what this can be!"

commissioned to bear to you, sahib."

known as the Sahib David Amber."

me?"

counterfeited.

wise to lingering her chair.

find out?

amount of his income and the way he Device to Disarm Submarines. wanted to live," replied one of the group, an actor who had gained considerable notoriety by reason of his various matrimonial entanglements. "If it isn't an impertment question, The visitor from Philadelphia said it

new device for protecting warships against submarines when the former are stationary. It consists of groups the queen herself often honors with of cylinders, about two inches in di- her presence. Women may stay there ameter, filled with high explosives overnight with all the comforts of and moored around the battleship, the home, and a card party or other kind

The French are experimenting with not worry very much about adding over in your town, but, take my word comes in contact with one or more for it, in New York it wouldn't keep of them it is entangled by the entire group, whose simultaneous detonation wrecks the submarine.